We are pleased to welcome Office and Operations Manager Nancy Wright to our staff. Nancy joined us in July and is responsible for the daily operation of the Meetinghouse Museum, along with other administrative work. You are likely to be greeted by her smiling face if you visit the museum, or by her cheery voice if you give us a call.

Nancy came to the Cape 31 years ago after marrying her “partner in crime,” Kevin, who holds the position of Administration and Operations Assistant at the Atwood House Museum in Chatham. Nancy has also served as a volunteer there, and the partnership has already benefitted both organizations as we work to promote each other’s museums and events.

“Nancy’s people skills, her passion for knowledge and sharing new ideas, plus her willingness to do everything from welcoming visitors to data entry to watering the garden, has already made her an invaluable member of the OHS family,” said OHS Executive Director Gail Nessell Colglazier. “I am delighted to have Nancy as a co-worker.”

Both Nancy and Kevin have found new lives in the field of history and museums, a completely different direction from where they started (Nancy’s background is in the medical field).

Always craving to learn, and very open to different opinions and approaches to life, Nancy is embracing her new role at OHS, hoping to become involved in any and all opportunities that arise in the future. At the same time, she is absorbing as much Orleans history as time allows. She hopes to grow professionally as OHS plans for its own expansion.

Nancy’s proudest accomplishments were as a homeschooling educator. Her daughter, Audrey, recently accepted a position as violinist with the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra at age 26. Nancy finds great enjoyment in continuing her own studies in flute and classical guitar, playing regularly with local “fluties.” She has been a member of the Chatham Chorale, The New Horizons Band, and The Sound Dunes Swing Ensemble. She also enjoys knitting, hand sewing and quilting, and spending time in Harwich Community Garden, as well as her own backyard gardening. Love of the outdoors and nature led her to the Cape originally, and she calls this her lifetime home!

With those words, a friendship instantly began among two daughters – one of the rescuer, the other of a man saved – who met recently at Rock Harbor in Orleans nearly 65 years after fate brought their fathers together in what is still known today as “the greatest small-boat rescue in Coast Guard history.”

Patricia (Pattie) Hamilton is an Eastham resident and the daughter of Bernard (Bernie) Webber, Coast Guardsman and coxswain of the CG36500 during the February, 1952 rescue of 32 men from the broken tanker Pendleton in a ferocious winter storm. Renee Pellegrino, from Maryville, Illinois, is the daughter of Raymond Steele, who was an Able-Bodied Seaman aboard the Pendleton and one of the men saved by Webber and his crew. When the Pellegrinos made a “bucket list” trip to Chatham this past June, one contact led to another and the two women were brought together in a surprise, once-in-a-lifetime meeting.

Pattie and Renee went aboard the 36500, and Renee got to sit where her father had sat after being rescued. It was a very emotional moment for both women, Pattie recounted. And the shared experience sealed their friendship forever. They have kept in touch frequently ever since. (continued on p. 4)
Letter from the Executive Director

Autumn 2016

Summer is winding down and, by the time you read this, Labor Day will have passed, there will be fewer people around, and it will be my favorite month of the year on the Cape.

We have had a busy summer, with lots of visitors from as close as Orleans and as far as Great Britain, visiting our museum, attending our programs, and checking in on the CG36500 at Rock Harbor. Some were first-time visitors while others told us “We come to see you every summer when we are here.”

While we love to have out-of-town visitors, we don’t ever want to forget the local residents and property owners who support us. In that spirit, we sent out a survey to our members earlier this year, asking them what they liked (or didn’t) about OHS, and what they might like to see us do in the future. We got about 100 responses and, thanks to Board member Kathleen McNeil who summarized them, we got some great feedback.

People said they most enjoy visiting the Meetinghouse Museum and the CG36500, followed closely by our antiques show, lectures, concerts, and walking tours. Many suggested things they would like us to do in the future. Some we have done in the past and hope to do again. Others are things we are doing now but could do better. Some are brand new ideas. We are a small organization and can’t do them all, but here are some ideas (and my comments) we hope to achieve in the next months and in 2017:

- Establish a historical book club or offer talks by local authors – We have had some authors speak this summer and hope to do more next year.
- Offer genealogy seminars and research workshops – Great idea! If you know someone who could teach one, let us know.
- Host more concerts; more music! – We hear you. We have several concerts on the schedule this fall so check the listing of events on p. 5 for details.
- Schedule historic house tours – Great idea! If you have a historic home you would consider opening for a tour, let me know.
- Present more local history lectures – This already is a major part of our programming effort, and I hope you heard some of our summer speakers.
- Sponsor group trips to other museums on the Cape or nearby – Another great idea and we hope we can offer one or two next year.
- Expand the website – Excellent idea, and one we are working on right now.

I appreciate everyone’s suggestions and, if you haven’t had a chance to offer yours, I would like to hear from you. Please send suggestions to me at Orleanshs@verizon.net, drop me a line, or give me a call. Thanks very much, and I look forward to hearing from you.

Wish List

We would like to thank Nancy Fairchild, and Jerome & Joan Karter, for donating digital cameras – one of the items on our previous Wish List. Our current needs:

- Laminating machine so we can make signs more easily
- Tabletop mat cutter and a dry-mount press for exhibit labels and graphics
- Toaster oven for our staff/volunteer kitchen
- Volunteer willing to distribute flyers for OHS programs to various locations around Orleans (post offices, shopping centers, etc.). We will make the flyers and give you a list of locations. During the fall, this may be about once a month.

Please contact Gail or Nancy at 508 240-1329 or Orleanshs@verizon.net if you can donate or help buy these items.

“THE CHATHAM PIRATES” AND A SHIP’S CLOCK

“Within a few days of the wreck of the Pendleton in 1952, as soon as the seas subsided, some of the local seafaring folk, known affectionately to me as ‘The Chatham Pirates,’ clambered aboard the remains of the broken stern section. Rumor had it of items found aboard and the stories ran high about the finds. Although close mouthed secrecy prevailed as the order of the day, for fear there might be some government or salvage claim, certain items stood out as cherished souvenirs and were talked about in hushed voices.”

– Bernard Webber, June, 1982.

Among the “certain items” referred to by Webber in his 1985 book, Chatham “The Lifeboatmen,” was the ship’s clock – the heartbeat of any vessel. It was presented to Webber in 1966 upon his return to the Cape after retiring from the Coast Guard. Sixteen years later, he donated it to the Orleans Historical Society (OHS) in commemoration of the completed restoration of the CG36500, the lifeboat he piloted during the famed rescue of 32 Pendleton crew members.

Early this year OHS was contacted by the Chelsea (Mass.) Clock Company, which had just heard that the Pendleton clock might still exist. Was it actually one of their own?

By tracing the serial number etched on the back of the Pendleton clock, Chelsea confirmed that they had made it and sold it to the U.S. Navy on May 17, 1944. It likely was original equipment on the Pendleton, which was built that same year by Kaiser Company in Portland, Oregon, for the War Shipping Administration.

In his presentation of the ship’s clock to OHS in 1982, Webber said, “It rightfully belongs on Cape Cod and in the possession of Cape Codders who traditionally rise to the occasion of humans in need.” And true to the lifesaving heritage of “never giving in,” the Chelsea clock can still keep perfect time. It is on display at the OHS Meetinghouse Museum.

Renee told Pattie in later correspondence that her father left East St. Louis after WWII to follow an older brother into the Merchant Marines. By 1952, Ray Steele was a seasoned hand with seven years’ experience from dozens of round-trips to South and Central America in the banana trade. He loved jazz music and visited the top clubs in New York City whenever he could between voyages. His favorite musician was renowned saxophonist Coleman Hawkins, whom he loved so much that he vowed to name a son after him – if he ever had a son.

Ray was 25 years old when he shipped out on the Pendleton from Baton Rouge, Louisiana, on February 12, 1952. Six days later he was in peril off the shores of Cape Cod and, as he later recounted to his family, there were times on the drifting stern of the ship when he thought a rescue would be impossible. Then, out of the darkness came the CG36500.

After that terrible experience, Renee said her father never went back to sea. Instead, he returned to southern Illinois with his wife, Marie, and young Renee, and began a successful career in sales.

Just a few weeks after the Pendleton rescue, Renee said her parents learned they were having another child. Sure enough, in December they had a baby boy and named him Coleman. Renee fondly remembers growing up with her brother and other siblings in a happy home surrounded by many family members and lots of music – especially jazz.

Renee’s father died in 2006, one week after his 79th birthday. Having heard stories from him about the Coast Guard and Pendleton rescue, she was determined to travel to Chatham one day to see where it all happened.

Pattie and Renee talked for a long time that day they met, exchanging memories of the rescue and their fathers. They were keenly aware during their time together that things could have turned out very differently that stormy night in 1952. Bernie Webber and his 36500 crew felt they were just doing their duty. But for Ray Steele, the rescue meant much more. It was the night that his dreams were saved, and he realized he would share his love of music with Renee and his family for generations to come.

IT MAY GET A LITTLE CROWDED

Parking in the lot adjacent to the OHS Meetinghouse could get crowded at times starting in October when the Orleans Police Department moves into its temporary office trailers there. Also, periodic disruptions prior to October are likely as the site is prepared and the trailers are delivered. If necessary, additional parking for OHS activities can be found on School Street across from Town Hall. (From there, a lighted walkway leads to the upper parking area and the Meetinghouse.)

Because the Police Department, as well as the Department of Public Works, will be using the parking lot, spaces for OHS will be available but more limited over the next 18 months or so. However, the police trailers will be located on the grassy strip on the west side of the property, leaving the entire paved area for shared parking. The Police Department anticipates vacating the trailers and occupying their new facility at the corner of Eldredge Park Way and South Orleans Road (Route 28) during the first quarter of 2018.
